Chelsea girls

A keffiyeh has been the neckwear de choix for what seems like years, but we can finally stop making like gap-year-wannabes in Goa – the Sloane-tastic silk scarf is staging a comeback. Want proof? Check out Nicole Richie's Queen Mother-esque look and Claudia Schiffer's skinny air-hostess tie.

It's all about substantial pieces of fabric that you can fold in a multitude of ways, Hermès-style, but the key difference between these and the ones your mum used to wear in the Eighties is the print. Today's scarves sport quirky, make-you-look-thrice patterns – as seen on these hot new labels, right.

We're all talking about... The new Speedy

Like a good Burgundy, Louis Vuitton's iconic arm candy just gets better with age. Launched in 1930 as a travel handbag and adopted by stars such as Audrey Hepburn, the Speedy has taken on many guises, from Takashi Murakami's cherry print to the Stephen Sprouse graffiti-covered sellout. To celebrate Selfridges' 100th birthday, a Speedy pop-up store is open from 1 to 25 June: see an exhibition of the bag's history and pick up limited-ed reissues like this leather version, below (£1,200; 0800 123 400).
